

WINTER QUARTER 2019

RESEARCH EXPOSED!: POPULATION HEALTH

GEN ST 391D: SLN 15030

The Undergraduate Research Program's (URP) Winter 2019 Research Exposed! course will feature University of Washington faculty discussing their population health-related research. This course may be taken for credit (1 credit/quarter; 3 quarters max). Each lecture is open to all interested faculty, students, staff, alumni and members of the community.

Wednesdays, 12:30-1:20 p.m. | Odegaard Library, Room 220

Wednesday Jan. 9	Course introduction Population health introduction		Jennifer Harris, URP Derek Fulwiler, Population Health
Wednesday Jan. 16	Global Burden of Disease: Understanding Health Disparities		Ali Mokdad, Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation
Wednesday Jan. 23	Obesity and Social disparities in Diets and Health		Adam Drewnowski, Public Health
Wednesday Jan. 30	Developing Sustainable Infrastructure for Cities		Gundula Proksch, Built Environments
Wednesday Feb. 6	Homelessness Research Initiative: Understanding Housing and Food Insecurity among University of Washington Students		Rachel Fyall, Evans School
Wednesday Feb. 13	Understanding How Social and Cultural Factors Influence the Health of Latinx and American Indian Communities		India Ornelas, Public Health
Wednesday Feb. 20	REFUGEES Project: Oral Health among Immigrant Populations		Ana Lucia Seminario, Dentistry
Wednesday Feb. 27	Benefits of Nature Contact to Human Health		Greg Bratman, College of the Environment
Wednesday March 6	Undergraduate researcher panel		Jennifer Harris, URP Undergraduate panelists

COURSE BACKGROUND

Sponsored by the Odegaard Undergraduate Library, Undergraduate Academic Affairs, the Undergraduate Research Program and the Population Health Initiative.

For more information, visit www.uw.edu/undergradresearch/research\_exposed/ or contact the URP at urp@uw.edu.

WHAT IS POPULATION HEALTH?

Population health is a broad concept encompassing not only the elimination of diseases and injuries, but also the intersecting and overlapping factors that influence health.

Learn more at www.uw.edu/populationhealth.